We strive for "Performance On Demand"

So many people, when they're practicing (assuming they ever do), will try to do something, and fail, time after time, then if they succeed ONCE, they'll count that as their skill level. It's not "What can you do if we let you try, over and over again, then count only your best performance when you got lucky once?" It's "What can you do if you have to grab the gun and go, and every bullet that exits your gun muzzle counts".
